

CPC Response to the COVID-19 Pandemic

As of June 30, 2020

Thanks to our supporters, Chinese-American Planning Council (CPC) has offered COVID-19 relief and assistance to over 15,000 community members across the city since March 22nd when non-essential work in New York State went on PAUSE.

Provided services remotely and on the front lines to support vulnerable New Yorkers

- 27 children of essential workers served in the newly opened Regional Enrichment Center (REC) in the Lower East Side of Manhattan, which will continue service until September 8, 2020
- $376,000 in supply grants was disbursed to 628 childcare programs and $275,000 in scholarships was given to essential workers to cover their childcare expenses through New York State's allocation of the Federal CARES Act
- 200 affordable senior housing residents were supplied with emergency meals, health assistance, and other wellness support
- 6 residents with intellectual and developmental disabilities were supported with 24/7 care in our group home
- 521 households were provided direct cash assistance, ranging in amounts from $400-$2,000 based on financial need and funder guidelines
- 3,000 homebound seniors and people with developmental disabilities served by 4,500 home care workers
- 10,000 texts and calls made during Census outreach and 2,850 reached through in-person and virtual engagements to ensure a complete count
- 19,400 wellness or referral calls were made to support seniors and their families
- 3,900 calls were made to CPC, with 430 SNAP applications submitted (300 families receiving SNAP benefits) and 240 individuals enrolled in unemployment insurance
- Twice-daily news briefs were shared on 1480AM/1240AM radio in Cantonese and Mandarin, so families had translations of critical information in real time

108,500 lbs of food (50,700 meals) distributed to families and seniors in Brooklyn, Queens and Manhattan

95,500
wellness calls or remote sessions held to support toddlers, preschoolers, school-aged children, youth, adults and their families

CPC Response to the COVID-19 Pandemic
